THAT DAY AT FIVE FORKS.

CLOSE OF THE EVIDENCE BEFORE THE WARREN COURT OF INQUIRY,

en. Warren Goss on the Stand Again and Belates the Story of bis Conduct in the Pield and his Talk with Gen. Sheridan.

At the opening of the Warren Court of Inquiry yesterday morning, Lieut. J. H. Blakemore, formerly ordnance officer in Ransom's brigade of the rebel service, was the first witness. Lieut. Bjakemore now resides at $12 Greens avenue Brooklyn and is a commission merchant in New York. The purpose of his testimony was to show that at the battle of Five Forks the Confederates were more strongly pressed by the infantry under Gen. Warren's command than by the cavalry. His testimon; supported the view taken by Gen. Warren. He was cross-examined by Major Asa Bird Gardwater were drawn from the two storage reservoirs and the natural lakes and ponds. Improvements have been made in the outlets of lakes Mahopac and Kirk and Barrett Fond, so that more water may be drawn from them. The report continues:

"A contract was made for the new reservoir at Kensico, on the Bronx River, at an estimated expense of $199,568. Bids were also received for 16,500 lineal feet of the four-foot pipe conduit from the Bronx, but no contract has yet been made. Five and thirty-six hundredths miles of pipes were laid and 141 new fire hydrants set to extend the distribution of Croton water. The high service works now furnish 9,000,000 gallons of water daily—1,500,000 at High Bridge and 7,500,000 at Ninth avenue and Ninety-second street.

"The consumption of water during the hot and dry weather was very great. In September the depth of water in the city reservoirs was reduced 2% inches; and but for the saving effected by the use of meters and by house inspections, great inconvenience would be felt from diminished pressures in the delivery of the water. During the quarter 970 meters were placed, and 3,314 were in use on the 30th of Septembor.

"The waste water gauge invented by Mr. B. S. ner with a view to show that he was not fully informed of the events of the battle. Lieut. Blakemore said that the Confederates were taken by surprise at the overwhelming numbers of the Federal troops that poured in upon them from the quarter occupied by Gen, War ren's command.

Gen. Warren then resumed the stand himself and gave testimony relating to a number o points in the case, but gave no detailed account of the battle, that having been given by him in his previous testimony. Gen. Warren, how ever, told of his own movements on the day of the battle from the morning until the battle was substantially over, when he was relieved by order of Gen. Sheridan. He remained at his beadquarters until about 10 A. M., and then left for the front in consequence of the news he had received from Gen. Ayres that his troops were being driven in. Gen. Warren put in evidence a sketch that he had sent to Gen. Ayres on the morning before the battle, showing the topography of the country and the disposition of the forces on both sides, so far as known. He had been thus particular in informing Gen. Ayres, because his own understanding of what Gen. Sheridan expected of him was very explicit. He had witnessed Miles's temporary repulse, and had made proparations to make a determined stand if the corps should be driven back. Alluding to a despatch written by Gen. Grant on March 24. Gen. Warren said that it was a mistake to say that the Fifth Corps was driven back at the battle of Five Forks. Gen. Griffin's division, forming a large part of the corps, was not driven in. Only one portion of the corps was forced back. With reference to his conference with Gen. Sheridan mear Dinwiddie Court House previous to the battle, he said that his talk with Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he thought he fully understood what Gen. Sheridan was full and earnest, and he for on the corps. He remembered distinctly that the secont of Gen. Sheridan was full and the corps with Griffin's division. He remained there until he discovered the enemy's line, and then changed the disposition of his forces accordingly. He had gone pe headquarters until about 10 A. M., and then left for the front in consequence of the news he had

"Swing around to your left and we have got them?"

No, sir; no such thing as that. In our position, that was what we were trying to do. But he did not use that expression at all. I have heretofore given the expression that he did use—You have flanked them gloriously. I believe he expressed some anxiety that the troops on the right were going too far." Gen. Warren was asked by his counse! (Ar. Stickney) to state whether he had used every effort in his power to second the wishes of Gen. Shoridan so as to earry out his pians. Major Gardner objected, and while the court was consulting as to whether it should be admitted, Gen. Warren requested his counsel to withdraw it, saying:

I am willing to stand by my deed."

Major Gardner gross-examined Gen. Warren requested his counsel to withdraw it, saying:

I am willing to stand by my deed."

Major Gardner gross-examined Gen. Warren minutely with reference to his direct testimony, and especially with reference to some statement he had made in a published pamphlet on the subject. Gen. Warren said he did not think there was any material discrepancy between his pamphlet and the facts, although there were some errors arising from misinformation at the time the pamphlet was written.

This concludes the testimony in the case. There have been eighty-three sessions, and the evidence covers 4,500 pages.

The spacious basement room had been tastily decerated for the event, and fancy booths and claborately arranged tables fliied and covered with a great variety of articles were on every hand. The attendance was very large, making it almost impossible to see anything, and very difficult to breathe. Gilmore's band was present. Small boys with piping voices cried. "Journal of the Fair, only 5 cents." and all was bustle.

Among many other articles which are to be disposed of by bailoting or sale are a rowing shoil, a fine challee to be sent from Rome by the Pope, a stand of colors made by Tiffany, a sliver trumpet for the most popular fire battalion chief, and a pair of handsome pistols for the most popular police Captain. Mr. McKay also said that it was proposed to offer terms much more favorable to the company's licenses, and concluded that no application to Congress for the extension of the shoe and process patents had been made or shoe and process patents had been made or was contemplated.

Mr. Davis of Lynn, Mass, reported that he had had an interview with Mr. McKay, and that the latter claimed that the patents were valid up to 1881, except the speed patent, which would not until 1887. Mr. Davis said that the Lynn manufacturers held that they were bound by contract to Mr. McKay, and that their only resource was to abandon the use of his machines. Mr. McKay had suggested that he would sell the machines in fee simple for expression of the fair, and concerts will be given every evening. Mr. Mackenzie of Cincinnati followed on the other side, contending, first, that the patents of the McKay Company had expired, and, secondly, that they were absurd from the beginning. Patent the process of making a shoe! "oxclatined Mr. Mackenzie." Why, that process was well known before we were born, and must have been familiar to Meses in the wilderness, and was certainly indecistod by St. Crispin." He meant to contend for his rights, and would never pay a cent of royalty, to which he believed the McKay Company were hot entitled. At this point the Convention adjourned until to-day.

To-day Mr. McKay was allowed to argue his case before the Convention. He said: "Whether there should be a reduction of royalty between Aug. 31, 1881, and Dec. 31, 1881, is a matter of opinion. We should be glad to refer the mater to our Executive Committee and let them take the natter into consideration, and the committee you have selected may confer with them. After 1852 we will make a machine which we can sail at a price so low that no shoe manufacturer will care to make it himself." Mr. Rekelman inquired the reason for McKay's discrimination against manufacturers in this country in the price of his machines. The answer was that no patents on the McKay machines were held in Canada. Mr. McKenzie proposed that the question of the validity of the patents should be tested by a mutual agreement and curried directly to the Supreme Court of the patents not being susuanced the money should be refunded. Mr. McKay, however, did not take kindly to this proposition. Very little satisfaction was obtained from Mr. McKay, and after some further question of the McKay however, did not take kindly to this proposition. "The waste water gauge invented by Mr. B. S. Church, engineer on the aqueduct, to ascertain waste of water in private houses, was applied on fourteen houses at night time, showing a waste of from four to sixty gallons per hour, an average of seventeen gallons per hour for each house. Observations will be made with this gauge during the coming winter on about one hundred houses in the city."

The report shows that in the quarter the area of new pavements laid was 96,025 square yards. On the question of a new pavement for Fifth avenue, from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street. Mr. Campbell says:

The new pavement must either be granite laid on concrete foundation, or the best Macadam or asphalt on concrete. The first is objectionable because rigid and noisy. The second is comparatively free from noise affords a good foothold, but wears rapidly, and would at times be muddy and dusty. The third is smooth, noiseless, impervious to water, and durable if constructed of the best materials, but is considered more slippery than granite or Macadam. The block laid on Fifth avenue from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-seventh street in July, 1879, remains as perfect as when laid, having required no repair except a small spot about one square foot. To ascertain the comparative slipperiness of the stone and asphalt pavements, an account was kept of the number of fails of horses on the asphalt and on the adjoining block of stone pavement between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth streets. The observations were made from Jan. 19 to March 31, 1880—during 57 days, 13% hours each day, On the asphalt 487,900 horses passed, and there were 55 fails or part fails. On the stone sidered too short to afford a fair test.

Mr. William Heywood, Engineer of the city of London, had observations made for fift days, and found a sphalt one fail to 191 miles of distance travelled.
